A Chinese Pirate Junk. The coast of China and especially the southern part is infested with a race of sea-robbers or pirates. In their swift and capacious junks with all signs of their dangerous character hidden, they hug the shore, making signs of amity to passing vessels, and woe betide the unwary captain who accepts their friendly overtures and permits their near approach. Cert in destruction is the penalty for such carelessness.

My dear Ron,
How to much for your letter, I will write you next week.

I can't remember for the life of me which flowers they were. I'll bring my books home with me at Xmas (W.V.). I am pressing a flower of the meadow saffron, which one of my girls brought me.
Hope it will press nicely.
Glad to hear Daphi is because I heard she had hiccups last night.
